On 13 April, source determined that 6 AA guns were again emplaced on Reiterdamm. At about 8:45 a.m., 200 to 250 troops wearing red-bordered black epaulets and armed with rifles and light and heavy machine guns, left for advanced combat practice; the troops returned at about 2 p.m. On 15 April, a commission of 11 officers inspected the 5 buildings which were being reconstructed. Work on the houses was scheduled to be completed by 1 May. On 20 April, 25 to 30 troops drilled and the same number of troops received instruction on 4 T-34 tanks. On 23 April, about 80 to 100 troops wearing red-bordered black epaulets with tank insignia, armed with rifles and equipped with gas masks and field packs, were lined up in front of a quartering building. As this building quartered the tank training battalion, source concluded that the troops had completed training and were to be detached to other units.

Comment. Contrary to observations in preceding years, the units of the 10th Gds Tank Div stayed at their quarters until mid-day, and continued training at the post. The information does not indicate any changes in the distribution of the units at the post. The units of the 60d Gds Tank Regt, which were absent from Adolf Hitler Kaserne during the second week of May, probably engaged in short-term firing practices.
